At Any Cost?

Why Lowering Prices Could Save The Biz

BY JOHN H. MARMADUKE

At Hastings, we're convinced that the CD business can continue to be a good, slowly declining and profitable product, exposing new and established artists to the marketplace in concert with digital distribution. Our everyday interaction with customers in our multimedia stores shows they still shop our music departments with enthusiasm and an increasing appetite for CDs priced for less than $10. This is not only evident from conversations with customers but from the fact that our under-$10 business is up by double digits, while our over-$10 business is down by double digits. The difference is more than 30 percentage points.

Our recent merchandising experience had mid-lines increase fivefold when the price was lowered from $10.99 to $5.99. This makes a compelling argument: How much of the rapid decline in CD sales is a function of mispricing compared with digital cannibalization?

One of the new rules of digital commoditization is, when people can get it for less, your product must lower its price to compete. This is not a new lesson. Years ago, Microsoft was being ravaged by piracy throughout the world, with many countries not making any effort to police software piracy. After years of ineffective legal attacks on the pirates, Microsoft finally concluded that the best antidote for what it was experiencing was simply to lower prices in these markets. The DVD industry has come to a similar conclusion.

This may sound self-serving, for a retailer to want lower prices, but in the end what we all would like is to extend the life of the CD and the profit streams it generates for artists, labels and retailers. Without the CD, we fear many artists will never be heard, many careers never brought to maturity and legacy artists never created. The most recent NPD survey at the NARM convention showed that music customers think all the proposed new formats are viable, but only at an under-$10 price. Sure, there is still going to be a market for the over-$10 super disc with lots of extra features for the avid fan, as Nine Inch Nails recently proved on its Web site, grossing $750,000 in two days by selling 2,500 deluxe CD packages at a price of $300 each. There is more business to be had above and below the $18.98 manufacturer's suggested list price. In fact, one way to add value that allows for the higher price is to sell a digital copy with the physical copy, which is currently being tested by the home video industry.

The customers in our CD department are more casual shoppers. They are constantly weighing the various entertainment offers available to them, and if they can cherry-pick the album for 99 cents per song without digital rights management or get it for free through illegal means, it is going to lower what they will pay for the physical CD. This is not to say they discount the value of the CD altogether.

The first point of contact for the majority of music customers is still the CD and will remain so for many years to come. Over and over again, customers surveyed in the Nielsen and NPD reports have shown that they still find the CD of value. It has better audio quality, permanence and graphics that are not present in the digital domain. In addition, it has intrinsic value in that it is collectible and tradable.

The first step in addressing the mispricing of CDs is not to lower CD prices across the board. Instead, labels need to rewrite their new and renewing recording contracts so that they can quickly adjust the price to maximize market demand, which will increase the artist's exposure. Imagine how frustrating it is for a multimedia retailer like Hastings to see the videogame and DVD industries reducing prices within weeks if unit volume declines below the sales plan to maximize market share, while the music industry blames its contracts for lack of pricing action. The only rule for a successful markdown is, "Is it early?" We think this is a major culprit in music's loss of market share.

The second step is to stop signing contracts with guarantees (both to artists and executives) that made sense in the '90s but not in this century. The third is to experiment with all manner of pricing offers, high and low.

Music is enjoyed by more people today than ever in its history. Yes, digital distribution has challenged the music industry as few industries have ever been challenged. Maybe a successful business model for today's record label is not that elusive. I'll bet if you take a look at the structure and overhead of most record labels in the '70s, you will have a good profile for the kind of label that can sell millions of CDs, break artists and be profitable.

Hastings' roots are planted in the music business, and we have an emotional attachment to music. But the clock is ticking. Changes made a year from now will have less of an impact than those made today. Music is losing the battle for shelf space in our stores. Let's regain the pricing imperative to maximize the life of the CD.

John H. Marmaduke is president/chairman/CEO of Hastings Entertainment.

FOR THE RECORD

- In the June 28 issue, the producer credits for Mötley Crüe's "Saints of Los Angeles" should have been James Michael, producer, and Nikki Sixx and DJ Ashba, co-producers.
- In the June 21 issue, Bob Cavallo's title should have been chairman of Disney Music Group.
- In the June 21 issue, a story about Lionsgate's distribution and publishing agreement with Narnack Records should have said that Lionsgate will pay publishing royalties for the Narnack music that it uses. The story also incorrectly implied that Lionsgate will pay less than prevailing market rates for use of Narnack's music.
- In the June 21 issue, Disturbed manager Jeff Battaglia was misidentified.
- In the June 21 issue, the affiliation for journalist Mike Cerre should have been ABC.

MILEY CYRUS DISMISSES TABLOID TATTLE AND GETS BACK TO BUSINESS WITH A NEW ALBUM AND TOUR

BY CORTNEY HARDING
PHOTOGRAPH BY SHERYL NIELDS

Let's get it out of the way. That Vanity Fair photo shoot? ¶ For a teen idol that's suddenly been turned into glossy rag mag fodder, Miley Cyrus is remarkably sanguine when asked about the bare-shoulder, bedsheet-entwined photo. "I was embarrassed," she says in her rapid, self-assured clip, "but also it's like, every career thing that I do can't be perfect, and sometimes my decisions are wrong. I think that just makes me even more relatable. I don't think people will look at me any differently because they're like, 'You know what, I'm going to do stupid stuff too, and I'm going to make mistakes, and that's fine.' It still hurts when I think about it—but you know what, it doesn't mean that you can't move on."

So with that in mind, we'll move on. Cyrus certainly has—she's got a new record, "Breakout," out July 22 and is currently filming a "Hannah Montana" movie in Tennessee, followed quickly by a return to the Disney studios to shoot another season of the show that made her a household name. After the season wraps, she'll hit the road for another tour, hoping to mimic, if not best, the remarkable success of her last outing.

First cast as Hannah Montana at age 12, she quickly developed a tween following playing a character who is an ordinary schoolgirl by day and a rock star by night. The franchise quickly bloomed from a TV series to a full-blown marketing juggernaut, complete with five affiliated albums moving 7.29 million copies, according to Nielsen SoundScan, and a 70-date, sold-out tour that led mothers to write fictional essays about dead fathers in order to win tickets. With this new album, though, Cyrus is choosing to look forward and introduce her fans to a new side of her personality. Just because she's developing beyond the Hannah Montana name, though, doesn't mean that Disney won't pull out all the stops to ensure the record is a success, including the tour, media appearances and an international push.

"We felt good about the success of the last tour," says Chip McLean, senior VP of Buena Vista Concerts for Disney Music Group, clearly understating the obvious—according to Billboard Boxscore, Cyrus' tour made $55.2 million, with a total attendance of almost 1 million. "We expected to do well given the quality and the success of the show, but we did not expect this type of frenzy."

Tour dates for the new album have yet to be finalized, but McLean and his team are already thinking of ways to solve the problems of the last tour. "One of the constraints we have is that due to her [filming] schedule, she can't do what many bands do and tour until the demand is exhausted," he says. "We're weighing the pros and cons of having her do multiple nights in one big city versus her doing one-night shows in a number of smaller markets. Since she is someone who appeals to families, we can't just have her play the top 15 markets. Families won't be able to afford to make the trip, buy the tickets and pay for the hotel if we did that."

Affordability is another key question that McLean wrestles with, as the cost of the tickets for the last tour topped out at $65. "We felt good about that price point, but the ticketing system right now can be exploited, and it was," he says. "This tour was unique in the sense that it lifted the rock and exposed the underside of the secondary ticketing market."

Luckily, even those who lost their shirts buying tickets for their daughters from ticket resellers should be able to easily procure a copy of Cyrus' new album. And although the release represents Cyrus taking what Disney Music Group chairman Bob Cavallo calls "great strides to become a valid artist," she has clearly not forgotten her base. "She is aiming it older, but not that much," Cavallo says. "I am confident her young fans will like it too."

"It's an exciting time for her," her manager Jason Morey says. "She's really grown into a great singer/songwriter. The combination of her young age and her talent for writing is definitely helping her create music that appeals to both the Radio Disney audience and top 40 listeners."

It's this outreach to other audiences that Disney is helping facilitate. "We have quite a marketing plan," Hollywood Records GM Abbey Konowitch says. "We are focused on keeping her in the public eye, and the fact that she's a celebrity is helpful."

In terms of the nuts and bolts of the campaign, Konowitch lays out the master plan, starting with the June 28 premiere of the video for "Seven Things I Hate About You" on ABC and the Disney Channel. "The video will go up on MTV the following week, and this will be the first video she has on MTV," he adds. The single rockets 70-10 this week on the Billboard Hot 100, tying a career best.

Cyrus will also play the "Good Morning America" Summer Concert Series July 18 and the "Today" Toyota Concert Series July 25. She'll continue with her popular Cyrus-produced YouTube series, "The Miley and Mandy Show," and has struck a deal with Verizon for ringtones and other exclusives.

The marketing plan is not limited to the United States. Previous albums "Hannah Montana" and "Hannah Montana 2: Meet Miley Cyrus" as well as the CD/DVD live package "Best of Both Worlds Concert" are still being worked as catalog releases with TV advertising planned in the United Kingdom, where they are distributed by EMI. The "Best of Both Worlds" live album peaked at No. 69 on the European Hot 100 in May. The album reached No. 10 in Ireland and Brazil, No. 14 in Austria and No. 29 in the United Kingdom. It also peaked at No. 54 in Switzerland and No. 71 in Mexico. "Hannah Montana 2: Meet Miley Cyrus" and "Hannah Montana" have achieved gold status in the United Kingdom, according to Disney Music Group.

"Breakout" is not yet scheduled for release in Europe, although it should arrive "sooner rather than later," according to London-based Mike Storey, Disney Music Group marketing director for Europe, the Middle East and Africa. "Obviously we want her to promote it so we're just waiting to firm up some artist availability before we set a release date."

Storey says that the United Kingdom, Norway and South Africa are the big markets for Cyrus outside the States, adding that Germany is a growing market where the TV show is "really popular." The Disney Channel U.K. shows "Hannah Montana" every day and will screen the "Best of Both Worlds" concert in the fall.

"See You Again" from the "Meet Miley Cyrus" album is enjoying airplay on stations including Capital FM. "The track was spontaneously picked up," Storey says, comparing the radio plan in the United Kingdom to that in the States. "The fact that we get radio play for Miley Cyrus and haven't had it for Hannah Montana says it all . . . she's not as developed as [the Hannah Montana] persona overseas as she is in the States. The sense of ownership is missing over there, but we are sure once she gets over there, she will connect."

All parties agree that none of this would be possible without Cyrus' boundless energy and talent. "She has a better sense of herself at 15 than most artists twice her age," Morey says. Cavallo adds that "Miley grows really fast," and Konowitch says, "She's a real artist, and she works incredibly hard."

MEGA MILEY

In less than two years, Cyrus-related albums have shifted 7.36 million copies in the United States, according to Nielsen SoundScan. A TV advertising campaign for the back catalog is now raising awareness of Cyrus in the United Kingdom.

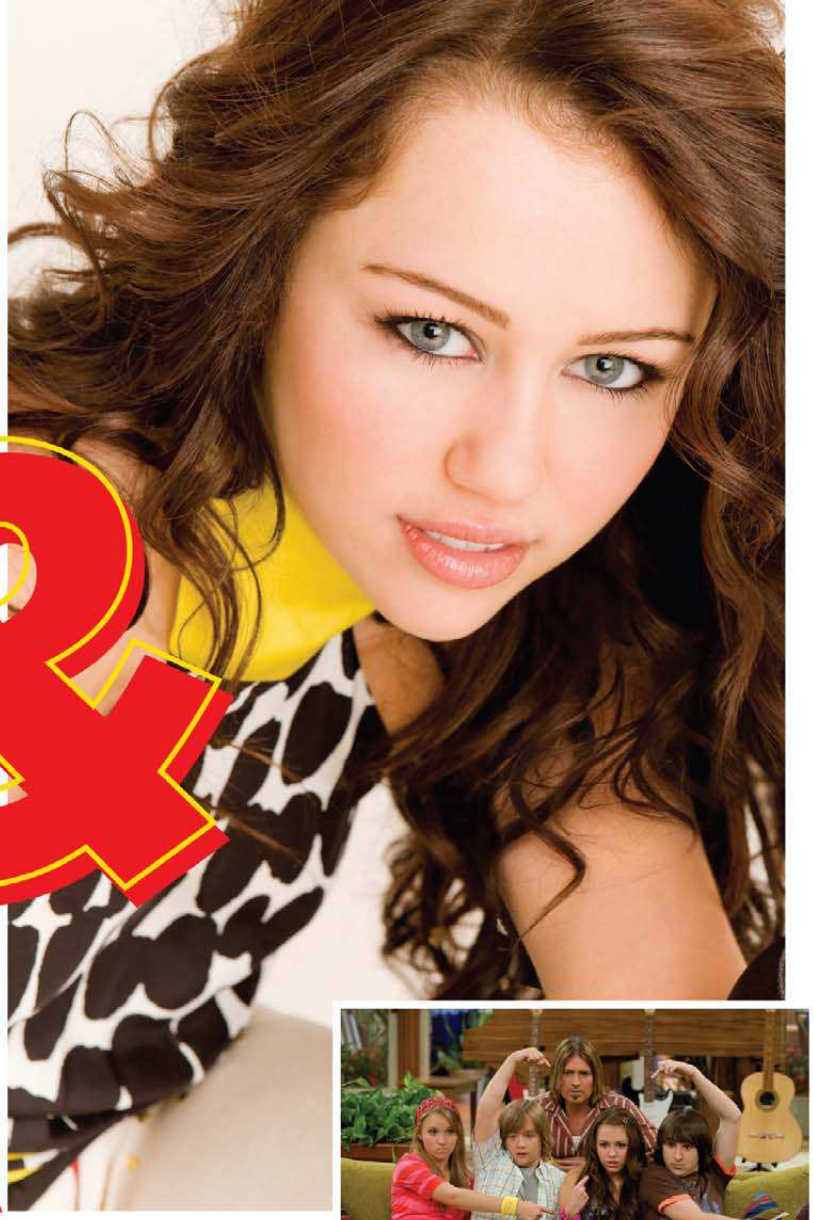
The Billboard Q&A



Cast as Hannah Montana at age 12, MILEY CYRUS says she hopes to keep doing the show (inset) for another two years.

THE HARDWORKING PROFESSIONAL SPILLS THE BEANS ABOUT HER NEW ALBUM, NEW MOVIE, TV SHOW AND THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING A GOOD ROLE MODEL

How is the new album different from your previous efforts?
It's grown-up. I wrote all the songs except two. My last one, "Meet Miley Cyrus," was more just meeting me, finding out who I am, and here it's more getting in depth of what's been going on in my life in the past year.

Not many people are aware that you're a songwriter. Can you talk a little bit about your process?
Songwriting is what I really want to do with my life forever. No matter how long what I'm doing here lasts, I want to be a songwriter for the rest of my life. I love it and it's my escape. I just hope this record showcases that—more than anything—I'm a writer.

I wrote my first song when I was probably 7—it was called "Pink." That shows what kind of song it was about—it's about the color pink. But you know what, darn it, I wrote it and I've been writing since I was my little sister's age.

At this point, though, when I'm writing I like to not listen to music at all because I don't want to ever be like, "Oh, this is cool," and start to sound like anyone else. I try to just kind of focus on my music and just continue to write, just kind of block everything out. I don't watch TV at night; I actually try to make sure my mind is focused.

There were many kids who were disappointed that they couldn't see you on your last tour. Are you planning to tour with this new record, and what are you going to do to make sure all your fans can see you?
Yeah, we're definitely going to go on tour. We're not sure when we're going to do that—probably early next year, later this year, we're not sure—but I want to make it a lot different. My last tour was successful, but I want to do something that no one's tried before.

In terms of the kids who couldn't get in, I don't know if I could do more—we did 76 shows last year and I don't know that I could do more than that. Maybe I could do that and take a little break and go back into it? Also, the 3-D movie was awesome for the people that didn't get to come see the show.

Those kids can also watch you in the third season of "Hannah Montana," which starts filming soon. After this season wraps, will you want to stay with Disney for the long term, or will the "Hannah Montana" show eventually wrap up and you'll move on to different projects?
It will wrap up, eventually. I mean, I won't be Hannah Montana by the time I'm 30. But we've only done two seasons, so we definitely want to work on that hopefully for another two years.

And the film you're working on is also tied to the "Hannah Montana" story, correct?
The story of the new movie is basically about going back to Tennessee and wanting to just kind of get back to your roots, but then realizing that maybe you don't want to go back to them. I think the movie is about just having the Hannah character not disappear, but kind of be put on the back burner for a minute and have Miley Stewart just really show her talent and also her ambitions and dreams and other things more than just the Hannah life.

Do you plan to act in other films that aren't connected to Disney or "Hannah Montana"? Perhaps some sort of really edgy indie film where you break out of the box?
I've been talking to people about some cool movies, but right now I mostly want to stay within my company and keep them happy and keep everything that we're doing successful and focus on that. I like to do everything that I do 120% and unless I can focus hardcore on that, I don't want to do it yet.

'No matter how long what I'm doing here lasts, I want to be a songwriter for the rest of my life. It's my escape.'

Yet you still find time to juggle all these projects. There was also some buzz about you writing a memoir a while ago—is that still the plan?
Kind of—it's more of a book for kids and teenagers, and I'm going to start working on that at some point. I love to write. Any way I can get a pen and paper and write down some ideas, whether it's a song, movie, book, anything—I love to do that.

You come across as someone who is very concerned with being a good role model for young kids and particularly young women. In an era when teen stars are falling out of limos with no underpants on, how do you make sure you stay true to yourself?
It's something that I've been super blessed with, that I've had the opportunity and the ability to spread the light. That doesn't mean that I'm not going to make mistakes and do things that everyone's going to be happy with, because there's no such thing as perfection. My thing that I always believe in—that I also try to tell girls especially—[is that] so many people look at these models and actors and singers and they're so perfect . . . [but] I say imperfections equal beauty. The most beautiful things in life are the ones that aren't perfect. There's so many beautiful things about life that won't be perfect that you'll learn from. I just like to be the role model that doesn't say you have to be perfect all the time. I like to tell them that their mistakes are beautifully broken.

A recent survey out of Canada highlighted your show as being great for young women because it showcases a wide range of body types. Is that something that you did intentionally, and is it important to you?
I stress about that stuff like everyone else, but at the end of day, I'm a good ol' Southern girl that likes her Cracker Barrel at 9 o'clock at night and if I want it, gosh darn, I'm going to eat it. I'm not going to make myself miserable. And for so many girls, you don't want to be thin because you want the guy to think you're gorgeous or whatever—you do it all for women, you do it all for a competition. That's so silly, it's such a game. [Why] waste your time with a game you're never going to win? There's always going to be someone that I think is prettier than me, there's always going to be someone that I'm going to think is a better vocalist, or a better writer, better guitarist. There's always going to be that, so why stress myself about the competition the whole time?

Are there any artists you look up to, or mentors who have helped guide you through this process and keep you focused? Anyone whose career you admire and might want to emulate?
Mostly my mom—no one knows better than the person that made Billy Ray Cyrus, you know what I mean? My mom was a huge part of my dad during "Achy Breaky Heart" and all that. No one knows better than her because [of what] my dad's already been through—and when he forgot most of it, my mom remembers every moment. [laughs]

As far as other artists, it's hard because everyone is so different. I went on tour with the Jonas Brothers and I got to watch them grow, I got to watch them become famous. When I first went on tour with them they hadn't really had their record out very long—and all of a sudden I watched them blow up. It was fun to watch them do that, and I like to see what kind of career moves they'll make. I like to watch other stars that have grown up in this business, but I think everyone's path is going to be so different and everyone needs to take their own direction.

I'm so happy with what I'm doing right now. I recognize that I'm super blessed and thank the Lord every day that I get to live my dream.

Disney Channel's TV movie soundtrack, featuring stars Demi Novato and Jonas brother Joe (below), starts with 188,000.

Set sees its 10th consecutive sales gain and its best week (29,000) since December as Kid's single "All Summer Long" continues to grow at multiple radio formats.

At No. 45, band scores its best sales week (13,000) and highest-charting album with second full-length. Last set in 2005 peaked at No. 158 with 7,000.

Rihanna's "Good Girl Gone Bad" is up 930% at No. 7 after it was reissued last week with four bonus cuts.

Marco Antonio Solís (No. 41) rises to No. 1 on Top Latin Albums, tying the singer with Luis Miguel for the most chart-toppers (eight) in the history of the list.

The Zac Efron-enhanced soundtrack grows for a second week following the film's HBO premiere earlier this month.

Eighteen-year-old comedian Bo Burnham bows at No. 123 (and at No. 3 on Top Comedy Albums) with debut digital-exclusive EP. YouTube phenom heads to NYU this fall.

Sister duo begins with nearly 4,000 and a No. 6 start on Top Heatseekers. Act's single "Rock Star" has sold 188,000 downloads to date.

Chanté Moore returns with her first solo set since 2000 (No. 110). Also debuts at No. 14 on Top R&B/Hip-Hop Albums.

The Tony Award winner for best revival of a musical (No. 143) is up 9%; best musical "In the Heights" jumps by 52% (No. 124).

This issue's cover girl soars on a 402% increase in digital sales (130,000 downloads). Song's jump into top 10 is the largest since another numerically named song, Madonna's "4 Minutes," leapt 68-3 in April.

As they bow with one of the four songs from the "Camp Rock" soundtrack that storm the Hot 100, "Burnin' Up," first single from Brothers' own Aug. 12 album, is the Pop 100's Hot Shot Debut at No. 72.

Lead track from the Pussycat Dolls' sophomore set, "Doll Domination," due in September, vaults 18-9 with a 71% jump in digital sales (128,000). Their first album, "PCD," produced five top 40 hits in 2005 and 2006.

Rapper follows No. 1 "Low" and top 20 "Elevator" with a strong sales start, entering Hot Digital Songs at No. 19 with 58,000 downloads.

PERRY GETS CAPITOL BACK TO BACK

Katy Perry's cheeky "I Kissed a Girl" takes the top spot on the Billboard Hot 100 and Hot Digital Songs, rising 2-1 on both charts and logs its best sales week, 235,000 downloads. Radio play surges as well, as "Kissed" jumps 19-12 on Hot 100 Airplay (up 28%). Perry also bows at No. 9 on the Billboard 200 (47,000 sold).

"Kissed" overtakes labelmate Coldplay's "Viva La Vida," marking the first time in 32 years that Capitol succeeds itself at No. 1. The last pair of Capitol titles to rule consecutively: Sylvers' "Boogie Fever" and Wings' "Silly Love Songs" in May 1976. —Gary Trust
